WHY AIPIS

Infrastructure should be judged by what it delivers

Africa has made strong progress in raising finance for infrastructure. Governments, development finance institutions, pension funds and private investors now plan and fund projects with growing skill, and several established summits help them do it.

The harder part comes after the funding is secured. AIPIS follows projects through construction and operation, and measures what they deliver for industry, jobs and living standards.

Projects stall after funding

Many projects stop or run over budget once construction begins.

Roads without factories

Assets open without the industrial activity that justified them.

Unfinished public projects

Abandoned works tie up public money that has produced no benefit.

Financial close

The point at which a project's funding is fully secured.

Prosperity close

The point at which a project can show measurable benefits to industry and citizens. AIPIS introduces this standard.

2030 edition reviews SDG progress

AIPIS is built around SDG 9 and contributes to nine other Goals. Every session, output and commitment is linked to SDG targets, and the 2030 edition in Kumasi will review progress in the SDG target year.

THE AIPIS DISTINCTION

Seven innovations

Each innovation builds on expertise the convenors already hold: KNUST's research in construction and project management, AIPAF's project assurance and forensic practice, and GCI's sustainability work.

01

Prosperity Close Standard

A published standard that defines when a project has delivered measurable benefits: firms served, jobs sustained, local content achieved and reliable service.

02

Africa Infrastructure Prosperity Index

An annual ranking by KNUST and GCI of how well African countries turn infrastructure spending into industrial and social results.

03

Unfinished Projects Forensic Clinic

Led by AIPAF. Panels of engineers, quantity surveyors, lawyers and auditors examine stalled projects and set out causes and a recovery plan.

04

Build-with-Africa Procurement Exchange

Pre-arranged meetings between project owners, contractors and African manufacturers of steel, cement, cables and building materials.

05

Site-to-Summit Field Day

A full day at live projects, industrial sites and local suppliers in the Ashanti Region.

06

Land, Traditional Authority and Infrastructure Roundtable

Traditional authorities, land agencies, developers and financiers on rights of way, compensation and benefit sharing.

07

Commitments Tracker and Kumasi Delivery Compact

Every pledge is recorded publicly and reported at the next edition. The summit closes with the signing of the Kumasi Delivery Compact.

AIPIS follows projects from financial close to prosperity close.
